

RESIDENTIAL AGED CARE AND COMMUNITY CARE

Aged care services in Australia range from basic home support services in the community to more intensive care services delivered both in the care recipient's own home and in residential aged care settings.

On 20 April 2012, the Australian Government announced the Living Longer Living Better (LLLBB) aged care reform package, recognising the various challenges and issues in the aged care sector. As a result, the aged care system has undergone significant changes including changes to primary and secondary legislation.

For operators, management and boards, this can mean facing unique challenges as government policies and transitional arrangements take effect.
